well as a mental journey through the whole of South America. After describing the ocean currents and the resulting temperatures of the regions, he dwelt on the enterprise and force of concentration of the inhabitants of Chili. The natives and climate of Terra del Fuego were described, and, finally, the cities on the eastern coast, up through Brazil, touching the great basin systems of South America.

James A. Simmons and George H. Pell, accused of embezzling the securities of the Lenox Hill Bank, began the holiday by taking breakfast at the Tombs.

They went to the District Attorney's office early in the forenoon and spent a large part of the day in arranging for their release on bail. Several of their friends visited them and Bernard Cohn, who is on the bond of P. J. Claassen in the United States Court, for $30,000, was ready to become surety for Simmons.

No Assistant District Attorney was at the office in the forenoon and the accused men and their friends waited until 2 o'clock, when Assistant District Attorney Davis appeared. He examined Mr. Cohn and found that he owned sixteen houses in West sixty-fifth st., from No. 130 to No. 166. He lives at No. 166 West sixty-fifth st. He values his houses at $300,000 and there are mortgages to the amount of $35,000 on them.

Mr. Davis decided that the security was sufficient and he approved the bond. Simmons, with the bondsmen and a deputy sheriff, went to Judge Martin's house and was released.

Pell's friends and his counsel, ex-Judge Donohue, awaited the coming of bondsmen for Pell. They had expected to give a bond earlier in the day, but the bondsmen left the District Attorney's office and did not return until Mr. Davis had gone to the home of Democratic Club. The bondsmen, when he did return to the District Attorney's office, said that his name was Theodore A. Squire. He is a builder and is a member of the Sons of Spider & Whistle.

Mr. Davis approved the bond. The party then went to Judge Martin's house, in Fifth Ave., near one hundred and twenty-fifth st., and Pell was discharged.
